Feeling a Sense of Connection

Spirituality is a broad concept with room for many perspectives. Different people experience and express their spirituality for different reasons and in different ways. Sometimes life, a tragedy, or adversity can wear down your hope and test faith, leaving you feeling vulnerable or questioning your faith. This can be a normal part of growing and exploring spirituality.

- ✔ Struggling with one's faith can be normal; it's part of growing. It's also normal to have questions about faith, the meaning of life, and the presence of a divine spirit in our lives. Exploring your faith can actually help you strengthen your spirituality by reconnecting you to your beliefs and renewing your mind.
- ✔ Exploring spirituality with a trusted clergyperson or chaplain can help provide relief, healing and offer a healthy outlet.
- ✔ Prayer can be an important part of developing your spirituality and practicing your faith. Becoming more spiritual means accepting waiting, finding ways to listen patiently and realizing that sometimes the answer to a prayer is not immediate.

Ecosystem of Support: Areas of Focus > Spirituality

Worship Services

We can practice our spirituality by the discipline of 'showing up.' Presence is the way in which we indicate our priority to give our attention to something or someone.

The dominant practice of spirituality can mean attending a worship service. For others, it may also mean dedicating time to learn more about their faith or religion by reading scripture, or attending classes and workshops.

Gift of Time

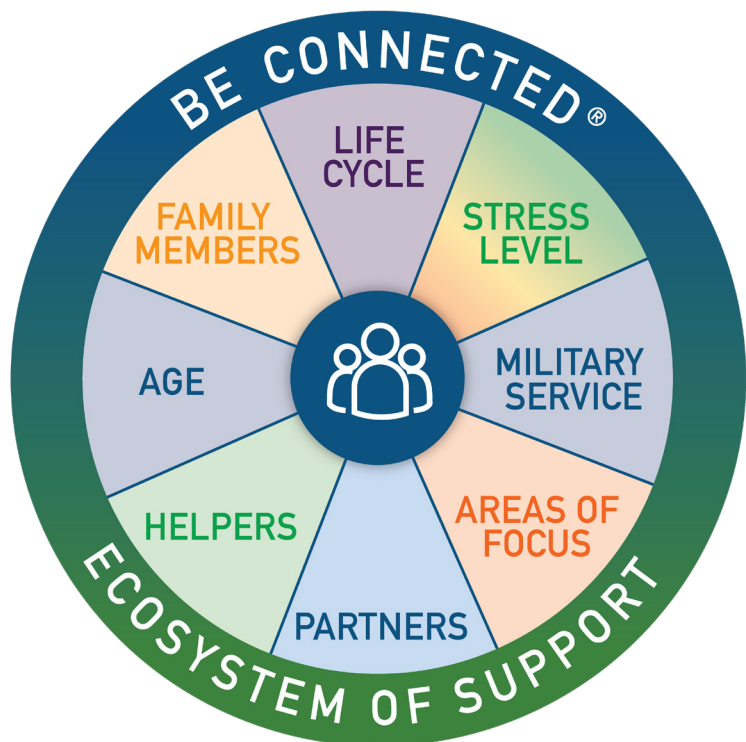

An alternative way to feel connection to others is to be generous with your time and talents. Find ways to serve others including volunteering. Consider giving a talk at your local house of worship.
