Maximizing the Benefits You've Earned

The decision to serve in the United States Armed Forces is something that impacts your life during and after service. Through your service and sacrifice, you may have earned a variety of benefits that you can access throughout your life. Maximize the benefits you and your family have earned.

- You may be eligible for healthcare and non healthcare benefits from the Veterans Administration if you served in the Armed Forces, including Reserve and National Guard members. Eligibility may vary for each benefit based on your time in service, discharge status and other factors.
- Navigating benefits can be complex due to the multitude of programs, eligibility requirements and programs available at the state and federal levels. It can help to have a knowledgeable, trained advocate to guide you.
- Be sure to use a reliable and vetted resource to help you navigate your benefits. The Be Connected support line is available to connect you to a Veterans Benefits Counselor no matter where you reside in Arizona. These trusted counselors are part of the Arizona Department of Veterans' Services and can assist you with support in areas that include pension applications, appealing VA decisions, filing for survivor's benefits, accessing education and healthcare benefits and cutting through the "red tape" of bureaucracy.

Military Service Record

The first step to accessing and utilizing any benefits is to provide eligibility. To do so, you must have an accurate and up-to-date copy of the military service record.

Upgrade & Correct Military Discharge

If your discharge was other than honorable, you may be eligible to apply for an upgrade to or correct your discharge status. This may increase the benefits that you are entitled to through your service.

Healthcare, Education & More

There are a multitude of other benefits that you may qualify for including healthcare, homebound services, education and even coverage for funeral expenses.
